Materials and Resources

Prepositional phrases are introduced in the sixth grade skill progression chart. Lessons in the LTF guides which deal with prepositional phrases are:

- Sentence Structure Basics
- Sentence Variations
- The Poetry of Phrases
- Parts of Speech, Phrases, Clauses, and Sentences

Lesson Introduction

Authors use prepositional phrases to add specific detail, to add variety, to show relationships in location and in time, and to add imagery. If students deliberately begin to add prepositional phrases to their writing in the sixth grade, they will learn to write sentences that show, not tell.

Student Activities

Suggestions for using this lesson:

- Read the two Dickinson poems and the Dickinson quotes aloud, and have students orally answer the questions in the margin. Model first; then provide guided practice. You may have the students answer the questions in pairs.
- For the poem “After Apple-Picking,” students should be ready to answer the questions on their own. You can read each question and have the students underline the prepositional phrase that answers the question in each line.
- Require students to write commentary for “The Eagle” (Exercise A). Students should conclude that, like in the Dickinson poetry, the prepositional phrases Tennyson uses add particular detail and imagery and allow the reader to visualize what is happening in the poem.
- In Exercise B, several different prepositions will fit in the blank. Accept any that make sense.
- Have students write commentary for the Kinnell poem (Exercise C). They should see that, without the prepositional phrases, the poem lacks description, detail, and imagery. The whole poem is printed below if you want to show it to your students after they complete the exercise.
• All the stanzas of the Wordsworth poem (Exercise D) are also printed below. You may want to share the whole poem with your students after they complete the exercise.

“Blackberry Eating”
by Galway Kinnell

I love to go out in late September
among fat, overripe, icy, black blackberries to eat blackberries for breakfast,
the stalks very prickly, a penalty
they earn for knowing the black art of blackberry-making; and as I stand among them lifting the stalks to my mouth, the ripest berries fall almost unbidden to my tongue,
as words sometimes do, certain peculiar words
like strengths or squinched,
many-lettered, one-syllabled lumps,
which I squeeze, squinch open, and splurge well in the silent, startled, icy black language of blackberry-eating in late September.

“I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud”
by William Wordsworth

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o’er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host, of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the milky way,
They stretched in never-ending line
Along the margin of a bay:
Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves besides them danced; but they
Outdid the sparkling waves in glee;
A poet could not but be gay,
In such a jocund company;
I gazed—and gazed—but little thought
What wealth the show to me had brought.

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;
And then my heart with pleasure fills,
And dances with the daffodils.
A preposition links nouns, pronouns and phrases to other words in a sentence. The word or phrase that the preposition introduces is called the object of the preposition. A preposition usually indicates the time, direction, or location of its object to the rest of the sentence as in the following examples:

The comforter is on the bed.
The comforter is beneath the bed.
The comforter is between the sheets.
The comforter is beside the bed.
She arranged the comforter over the bed.
She covered up with the comforter during the movie.
She slept with the comforter until spring.

In each of the preceding sentences, a preposition locates the noun “comforter” in a particular place or time.

A prepositional phrase is made up of the preposition, its object (underlined in the examples above), and any associated adjectives or adverbs. A prepositional phrase can function as a noun, an adjective, or an adverb. Below is a list of the most common prepositions:

<tr>

Prepositions can be used to add great variety and detail to prose and poetry. The following poem was written by Emily Dickinson. Notice how she uses prepositional phrases to add specific detail to her writing. Look how many questions are being answered by the prepositional phrases. Without these phrases, this poem would be lacking both light and color.

A Light exists in Spring
Not present on the Year
At any other period—
When March is scarcely here.

A Color stands abroad
On Solitary Fields
That Science cannot overtake
But Human Nature feels.

It waits upon the Lawn,
It shows the furthest Tree
Upon the furthest Slope you know
It almost speaks to you.

Then as Horizons step
Or Noons report away,
Without the Formula of sound
It passes and we stay—

A quality of loss
Affecting our Content
As Trade had suddenly encroached
Upon a Sacrament.

When does the light exist?
When is this light not present?
Again, when is this light not present?

Where do you see the color?

Where does this light wait?

How far does this light show the furthest tree?
To whom does the light speak?

How does the light pass away?

What kind of quality does the light produce?

Where did trade suddenly encroach?
Look at how Emily Dickinson uses prepositional phrases in this poem to show relationships in location. Underline the prepositional phrase that answers the question in the right-hand column.

An altered look about the hills; Where is the altered look?
A Tyrian light the village fills; Where is the Tyrian light?
A wider sunrise in the dawn; Where is the wider sunrise?
A deeper twilight on the lawn; Where is the deeper twilight?
A print of a vermillion foot; Where is the purple finger?
A purple finger on the slope; Where is the flippant fly?
A flippant fly upon the pane; Where is the flippant fly?
A spider at his trade again; Where is the axe shrill singing?
An added strut in chanticleer; Where is the axe shrill singing?
A flower expected everywhere; Where are the fern-odors?
An axe shrill singing in the woods; Where are the fern-odors?
Fern-odors on untravelled roads,— Where are the fern-odors?
All this, and more I cannot tell, Where are the fern-odors?
A furtive look you know as well, Where are the fern-odors?
And Nicodemus’ mystery Where are the fern-odors?
Receives its annual reply.

Following are lines of poetry written by Emily Dickinson which contain prepositional phrases showing relationships in time. Underline the prepositional phrase that answers the question in the right-hand column.

- After a hundred years
  Nobody knows the place,— When does nobody know the place?

- After great pain, a formal feeling comes
  When does a formal feeling come?

- I have a bird in spring
  When does the speaker have a bird?

- God calls home the angels promptly
  At the setting sun; When does God call the angels home?
  I missed mine. How dreary marbles,
  After playing the Crown! When are marbles dreary?

- It burned me in the night,
  When was the speaker burned?

- On would they go on aching still
  Through centuries above When will they go on aching still?
• Reeling, through endless summer days,
  When is something reeling?

• But just before the snows
  There came a purple creature
  That ravished all the hill;
  When did a purple creature come?

• I heard a fly buzz when I died;
  The stillness in my form
  Was like the stillness in the air
  Between the heaves of storm.
  When was her stillness like the stillness in the air?

• If you were coming in the fall,
  I’d brush the summer by
  When are you coming?

• My life closed twice before its close
  When did the speaker’s life close twice?

Now look at all the prepositional phrases Robert Frost uses in his poem “After Apple-Picking.” Notice that the phrases help show the relationship of one thing to another. Isolating and identifying the questions answered by the prepositional phrases will help you to make sense of the poem. The prepositional phrases are answering the key questions of where, what, how, which, and whose as they relate to what the reader sees in the poem. Frost uses prepositional phrases to produce visual imagery, to show the relationship of one thing to another in the physical world.

What do the prepositional phrases enable you to see/know?

My long two-pointed ladder’s sticking through a tree
Toward heaven still,
And there’s a barrel that I didn’t fill
Beside it, and there may be two or three Apples I didn’t pick upon some bough.
But I am done with apple-picking now.
Essence of winter sleep is on the night,
The scent of apples: I am drowsing off.
I cannot rub the strangeness from my sight
I got from looking through a pane of glass
I skimmed this morning from the drinking trough
And held against the world of hoary grass.
It melted, and I let it fall and break.
But I was well
Upon my way to sleep before it fell,
And I could tell
What form my dreaming was about to take.
Magnified apples appear and disappear,
Stem end and blossom end,
And every fleck of russet showing clear.
My instep arch not only keeps the ache,
It keeps the pressure of a ladder-round. I feel the ladder sway as the boughs bend. And I keep hearing from the cellar bin The rumbling sound Of load on load of apples coming in. For I have had too much Of apple-picking: I am overtired Of the great harvest I myself desired. There were ten thousand thousand fruit to touch, Cherish in hand, lift down, and not let fall. For all That struck the earth, No matter if not bruised or spiked with stubble, Went surely to the cider-apple heap As of no worth. One can see what will trouble This sleep of mine, whatever sleep it is. Were he not gone, The woodchuck could say whether it’s like his Long sleep, as I describe its coming on, Or just some human sleep.

Exercise A
Underline the prepositional phrases in the following poem, “The Eagle” by Alfred, Lord Tennyson. The poem contains seven prepositional phrases.

He clasps the crag with crooked hands; Close to the sun in lonely lands, Ringed with the azure world, he stands. The wrinkled sea beneath him crawls; He watches from his mountain walls, And like a thunderbolt he falls.

Explain the overall effect and the purpose of the prepositional phrases in this poem by completing the sentence.

The prepositional phrases Tennyson uses add ________________ and _____________ ____________, which allows the reader to ________________________________ Exercise B
Prepositions show time and direction/location. In the following exercise, choose from the proper category to complete the prepositional phrase in each sentence. Then highlight the complete prepositional phrase. Don’t worry about making the statements correct, just make the sentence logical.

6. Galway Kinnell must have been strolling __________ blackberry bushes when he wrote “Blackberry Eating.”

7. Emily Dickinson bundled up her poems, sewing them ________ needle and thread.

8. Emily Dickinson stayed ____________ her father’s house for the last years of her life.

9. Robert Frost wrote famous poems about stopping _____ a wood, swinging _______ birch trees, mending a wall ______ his property, and finding a dimpled spider ______ a plant.
Exercise C
In the following poem, “Blackberry Eating,” by Galway Kinnell, the preposition has been removed from each prepositional phrase, leaving the object of the preposition and modifiers. Supply a preposition to create a complete prepositional phrase that makes sense in the line of poetry. The first line is done for you as an example.

I love to go out _in_ late September

_____fat, overripe, icy, black blackberries to eat blackberries ________ breakfast,
the stalks very prickly, a penalty
they earn for knowing the black art _____blackberry-making; and as I stand ________ them lifting the stalks ____ my mouth, the ripest berries fall almost unbidden ________ my tongue,
as words sometimes do, certain peculiar words
_____strengths or squinched,
many-lettered, one-syllabled lumps,
which I squeeze, squinch open, and splurge well
_____the silent, startled, icy black language _____blackberry-eating _____ late September.

What is the purpose of the prepositional phrases in Kinnell’s poem? (Model your sentence after the analysis sentence in Exercise A.)
Exercise D
Below are the first two stanzas of the poem “I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud” by William Wordsworth. Some of the prepositional phrases have been removed. Write complete prepositional phrases in the blanks to add detail and imagery to the poem. Some of the prepositional phrases are given to you. In Wordsworth’s poem, every other line rhymes: you might try to add rhyme in some places as a challenge.

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats _____________________________ (where)
When all ____________I saw a crowd, (when)
A host, of golden daffodils,
_________________, ________________ , (where)
Fluttering and dancing ________________________________.
Continuous ______________________that shine
And twinkle__________________________,
They stretched ______________________
Along the margin of a bay:
Ten thousand saw I ________________________,
Tossing their heads ____________________________.
