

DAN MANLEY

The Voice of the Montgomery County Indians

Dan Manley is not a dreamer; he is a doer. At an early age he didn't dream about what he wanted to do; he did it. As a result of his love of sports, Dan began covering sports activities on the radio at the age of 14 and writing about sports in the newspaper at the age of 16. Forty-five years later he continues to serve as a local legend and the voice of the Montgomery County Indians.

Dan received a bachelor's degree in Radio, Television, and Journalism Broadcasting, and a master's degree in business administration. Though he has varied work experiences, including 22 years as a trust banker and a stint as a sportscaster and videographer for a Lexington television station, he eventually elected to return to the work that he enjoys most, radio and journalism. He currently serves as News & Sports Director for WMST radio and Sports Editor for the Mt. Sterling Advocate.

Sports have always played an important role in the lives of the members of the Manley family. Dan is a native and life-long resident of Mt. Sterling. As a student, he had an opportunity to play baseball, but was limited due to a bout with polio. However, his brother, Mike, was a quarterback in college and was poised to play professional baseball had he not sustained an injury that prevented it.

Dan Manley lends his dulcet tones and sports expertise to calling games for Montgomery County football, boys' and girls' basketball, baseball, and softball. He firmly believes, "There are a million stories behind every story." We are grateful and proud that he has chosen to use his gifts to help tell the stories of the Montgomery County Indians.
